the Church vesting, Archbishop Vaughan delivered an address upon the subject of religious education. The church was filled to its utmost capacity long before the time when the commencing the service arrived. After prayers had been offered, his Grace addressed the congregation. He said and gentlemen.—One of the practical effects of the new school letters is manifesting itself here to-night. Fatherless and motherless children, who were formerly neglected and idle, are now in connection with this district-school, which will, I believe, over 1000 children. I have been requested to say some few words upon the occasion of this meeting, and I have been very glad to do so. You know that the newspapers have been teeming with lectures, sermons, and letters during the past week, denouncing the present system of education, and denouncing the present system of education. Some people have asked me to question education. I have not replied to these effusions; others have censured me on not having done so. Now, I will tell you what I think. Why should I have done so? I have been engaged in altogether another question; and my second is better than those gentlemen who are doing my work much better than I could do for myself. I am very glad to see that the school is doing so well. And this reminds me of Louth, where I was a Protestant clergyman, who flourished at the time of the 18th century. Like many clergymen of that day, he was a man of letters, and a man of letters. I am afraid I must add, he found more pleasure, as he himself expressed himself, in books, painting, fiddling, and shooting, than in the work of the ministry. At one time he was men without morality, or popular morality without religion, or religion without a form of worship. Christianity is not a religion, it is a way of life. I have written to you from Berlin, not from Rome. And he who speaks to you is a philosopher who has been before you in the flesh, and even persecuted by the clergy: the Church of Rome, understood, speaks with still greater emphasis, and says: 'These parents who send their children to school are under the dove of which you read, "Here reigns the peace of God." Ladies and gentlemen, I need not employ valuations, insisting on a truism. I am anxious, and Father is anxious, and you are anxious, to start a new school in this town. And this is the only way to do it. We are the fathers of this country and this free country, we could not confer a favour on our fellow-colonists, whatever may be the colour of their skin. But there is a way to profit from this colonizing. It is to start a school. Here is the home of our salvation. The eternal happiness of our children depends upon their dying in the faith of our God. We can expect them to die in God's faith, if there are enough of us to start a school. And this is that it is preparation for the battle of life, and for the other world? We know how difficult it is to be in the grace of God, how careful a religious and moral life, how much prayer, how constant a self-watchfulness, are necessary for the Christian man to escape succumbing through the temptations of this life. Where can practices better be learned than at school? If secularity does not realise the vital necessity of a Catholicism, the Church does. On no point has she spoken so strongly, so earnestly, so strongly. She, with her frankness and experience, has said to the young men of the common Christianity, and looks upon it as a matter of life and death that the young should be deeply and intensely imbued with the spirit of religion. Wherever temptation has been made to divorce religion from life, she has spoken boldly out. There is no question of making her own energy felt.

It is only the other day that a bill was introduced introducing secularist education into Belgium.

erty," "as dangerous and hurtful. We declare that it wears the spread of unbelief and indifference, and that it is an attempt against the faith, the purity, and the peace of the Church. For these reasons, we reprobate and condemn it. Again, determining ourselves to the teaching of the Holy See concerning the study of the Holy Scriptures, we declare that we rebuke and exhort ourselves of the Pontiff's own words: "We warn all the faithful, and make known to them that they cannot in conscience attend such schools, where they are not properly and devoutly instructed.
We observe carefully, dear brother, that these words of the Congregation are derived from a principle, and constitute a rule—applicable to all countries, 'in all places,' he says, 'in all times.' We are, therefore, bound to be strict, of withdrawing schools from the authority of the Church, and where, in consequence, youth will be misled and exposed to the dangers by the Congregation of the Holy Office and to the penalties by the Congregation of the Holy ding rule: such cases will only be temporary, until, in a near future, a perfectly organised Catholic social system will be able to take care of the needs of the poor. The head of a family will consult the priest of his parish as often as hearing the reasons, will report them to the bishop, who will then refer them to the competent authority in proper form, and the bishop will refer them to the competent authority in proper form, already cited, to the Archbishop of Freiburg, letters, and the Bishops of the North German, of Holland and Ireland, repeat that 'there is no need for the Catholic Church to be concerned with the women, and on the clergy to employ all possible means to provide for Catholic youth, Christian education and teaching. The struggle begins from the moment; it will be a struggle for the future, for the future of the Church, for the determination worthy of your character of Catholics and Christians, whilst repeating the cry of your forefathers, Dei est curatio, Deus vult! The honour of His Name, the honour of His Church, the honour of His people, the honour of your children and in your families, the salvation of your dear nished and supported, at their expense, schools where children receive instruction appropriate to their condition, social position, age, sex, knowledge, Catholic doctrine and the practice of the Christian virtues; that these exceptional good works have now to be made more effective by the aid of the State, which must be motivated, very especially, by the concurrence of all. Thus we hope, we are certain, that the Catholics of Belgium, animated by the sense of God and the love of God and of souls, and by the desire to see the young people of their country richly well-to-do—convinced as they ought to be of the importance and urgency of providing the young Christians schools—will commit it to duty and will devote themselves to it with great interest and zeal, maintaining them in every parish where they are needed, and supporting them. We need not stimulate the emulation between clergy in the union of all the faithful for the execution of such a noble work.

Their efforts will be crowned by the grace of God, and will be testimony by men in generosity or devotion.

solistic procession has always figured at the head of every procession, and the people have always followed with devotion. The glorious traditions of the priesthood of Belgium strikingly attest how they have always nobly undertaken their sublime mission, and they will fulfil it in the present century as they have in the past. The priest is the centre of unity, in this matter, of numbers of our priests who are comparatively poor. If all, clergy and laity, cannot help the priest by large gifts, few indeed amongst them will be able to do so by small ones. If a man can give a month, or year; and all can help it on, whether remaining fathers and mothers of their grave obligation bring up their families in the same way, or by sending prayers to the Cathedral to the young, or by themselves undertaking the duties of hostmaster or mistress—to work, then, very dear brethren, for the good of Belgium, and of the world.

deputy, and the Honorable, Bishop of Brabant, M^{rs} HENRI, Bishop of Namur, and the Honorable, Bishop of Liege, M^{rs} EDMOND, Bishop of Tournay. Here you see the Belgium bishops are animated with two main desires—to turn out a good citizen and a good Catholic. They are not like our Catholic people good Catholics, and, therefore, good citizens. They are not like our Catholic people, who are not Catholics, and, therefore, not good citizens. They are like our Catholic people, who are Catholics, and, therefore, good citizens. The love of God and the love of one's neighbor, are one; a good citizen of this world is the parent of a good citizen in the other; whilst a bad Catholic is a bad citizen. Therefore, the Honorable Bishops are endeavoring their people to do what you, ladies and gentlemen, are now bent upon doing for this important district. They are endeavoring to turn out good citizens and good Christians throughout the world. You are laying the foundations of good citizenship and faithful friendships, whilst, at the same time, you are ministering to the needs of the poor and the suffering. I am, therefore, glad. I thank you from my heart for all this, and look forward with immense delight to laying the foundation-

The collectors of the parish were then presented by the Rev. John H. Archibald, who addressed them in a few encouraging words.

The proceedings were then brought to a close.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE. SYDNEY INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

EXHIBITION.

A thing of beauty is said to be a joy for ever. The exquisite beauty and attractiveness of the Exhibition must captivate all who have had the good fortune to behold it, but it may be as well that we should remind the public that the Exhibition will not last for ever. We have the world brought to our very doors, and it would be a piece of unpardonable folly if we failed to take advantage of such opportunities. The weather is building in considerable numbers. The public need no under no apprehension about all the departments now being in perfect readiness, for the portions of the Exhibition which have been got ready will reward those who devote several days to their examination. Germany is emerging from her shell, but Austria is still behind her screen. The Department of Mines is doing good work in the South nave, and there are some very ornate English and American trophies being constructed in the north nave.

Their Excellencies Lord Augustus Loftus, Mr. Marquis de Noanaby, Sir William Jervois, and Mr. G. O. Roberts, the Secretary hall at half-past five o'clock on Saturday, where they were received by Mr. Jennings, the Executive Commissioner. Among other gentlemen who accompanied them on a tour of inspection through the building were the Honorable Wm. Victoria, Mr. Samuel Davisport (Scottish), Mr. G. H. Gurner, the Hon. C. D. Cameron, Mr. R. Edward Combes, M.L.A.; Mr. John Davies, M.L.A., and Mr. Jenkins, members of the Sydney Commission. They appeared to be much interested in many of the

The transformations in the grounds are being proceeded with rapidly, and groups of men are engaged on the lawns putting them in attractive form for the summer. The shower of rain which fell at noon on Saturday impeded the exterior proceedings very considerably, but it brightened the foliage in the Gardens and caused the flowers and plants to grow more luxuriantly. The new raised ramp for the Masonic-stair entrance of the Exhibition, and were surmounted with banners. The workmen are putting the final touches to the gold and coal trophy, which will now be one of the first things to meet the eyes of visitors coming up the harbour, and pavements are still being proceeded with, and some enjoyable promenades will be made in connection with the main building, when the same will be removed, and before long the space in front will be cleared. The scene there will be one of great beauty. The gardens will lie in the foreground, and behind them the harbour, with the numerous fine residences dotting its banks, in the

In the afternoon the first grand orchestral and vocal Garden Palace concert was given, and as soon as the overture was started, people began to mass in the north transept. The programme, whose performance lasted a little over an hour, had been well chosen, and the director of music, Signor Giora, may be complimented upon the manner in which it was carried out. The orchestra, which is scarcely as large as it ought to be, is a very compact one, and its members have, by frequent rehearsals, been so welded together, that they form parts of some melodious waltzes. Miss Broadhurst sang a couple of songs, and then the piano-fortes supplied, free of charge, by Nicholson and Ascherberg. Miss Marie St. Clair sang the ballad from Balfe's "Maid of Honour" with tenacity of expression that characterises all that she sings. Her rich voice expressed the light and shade of the poem, the tragedy and the comedy of the situation, the applause she received. Miss Vernon Reid sang "My pretty Jane," a deceptive ballad, one that looks easy to sing, but that is in reality difficult to give properly. Miss St. Clair and then performed the tempo and contralto duet from "Il Trovatore," "Al noi noi montes," with spirit and effect. Then came the song, "The Bird Song," from "Gianna's" "Post-card Galop," each of which went with a swing, and effective production, which did credit to the conductor. Other selections were "La Garza Ladrona" (Russian), "Il Trovatore," "Echoes of the Streets" (Fitzgerald), and "The United Service Ladies" (Fitzgerald). The program closed with the song, "The Non Willing," "Santa Dina," the grand song by the invocation from "Norma," and "The Mexican Nightingale," by Signor Gungl. Mr. Rainford is down for a solo, and among the orchestral music is Gungl's "Frühlings Liebs."

During the afternoon Mr. Charles Huenerbein performed a selection of music on one of the new Butlers in the Victoria Court, in the presence of a large number of visitors who were attracted to that quarter. Mr. Huenerbein has been engaged to play on two afternoons each week, and he intends preparing programmes and conducting his recitals in regular concert form.

In the Victorian Court, to-day, there will probably be shown a terra cotta group, by Signori Del Vesco and Sant, sculptors, Melbourne, which must attract considerable attention. It is much for the artist, for it is merely a foreboding in terra cotta of what it would be in marble, as for its poetic beauty of design. It represents Australis, surrounded by the four continents, and bears the motto and the title "Advance Australia." On a globe, ranged with the motto, stands Australis, a gracious maiden, whose lo-and whose whole attitude suggests progression. With one lovely arm raised aloft, and with her eyes directed upward and forward, she seems to invoke aid from above to enable her to take a sister's place among the nations. The star-like ornaments on her forehead and breast, and in her ears, form the Southern Cross, and as the central figure of the group, she towers above the others. To the left stands Europe, a majestic figure, wearing a cuirass, as befits her warlike nature, holding the sceptre of sovereignty, crowned with the Polar Star, and pointing proudly to her youngest child—Australia. To the right sits America, crowned and girdled with starry planets, and smiling kindly at the nations. The planets are represented by celestial signs, to show her freedom from the shackles of astrology.

of war, but still her attitude denotes victory in life. In front reclines the mother of nations, Asia, her dress rich with "the splendour of the harvest of the East," but every line of her pose to the eye is an admission of defeat. The artist, however, elephant converses the idea that in Asia exists a force now quiescent, which would, if exerted, raise her from the position to which the indolence and apathy of her people have relegated her. Last of all, and at the very end, the greatest site of the whole group, leaning upon the main altar, though her position is unexalted, is the figure of a woman, who is about to rise; and as the figure conveys a certain impression of lady power. Such is a general idea of this composition, which, even in terra cotta, is animated and beautiful. It can be seen in the gallery of the Victoria and Albert museum, as it would cost some £50,000 to execute in marble, a life-size, its designers are perforce compelled to leave in terra cotta. It has been suggested that the expense of its execution should be defrayed by public subscription, and that the statue should be placed in Sydney to commemorate the first Australian interest in the prohibition. Some of the Italians resident here have promised to subscribe liberally if the matter is taken up.

The Age of Wednesday reports that the Hon. Secretary stated, in the Legislative Assembly that day, that in telegram received from the Mayor of New South Wales, congratulating the colony on the near approach of the opening of the Sydney Exhibition, mentioning that, owing to the pressure of public business, many members of the Government were unable to be present at the opening, and expressing the hope that the following reply from Sir Henry Peck:—"The Hon. Graham Berry, I have much pleasure in acknowledging your telegram, conveying to the Government the expression of the best wishes of the people of New South Wales, on the approaching opening of the Sydney Exhibition. The people of this colony will, I am sure, appreciate your generous sympathy, and warmly reciprocate your friendly feeling. We hope the progress of the Exhibition will be successful."

In 1860 the Canale Caresini was begun, in 1868, in the Romagna, on the 6th August, 1868, at 1848 he played his part among the great crowd of Italian students in the events of that period, aiding the work not only in the field but by the writing of patriotic verses. In 1870 he was chosen to represent the Province of the line for the contemplated railway for crossing the central Alps. From 1860 to 1870 he was director of the works of the Caresini Canal, which placed the port of Ravenna in recommunication with the sea. In 1864 he was Commissioner for the installation of the Central railway, and in 1865 he was recalled to Rome by Devisementi, Minister of Public Works in the Lamza Administration, and placed in the Superior Council of that department. In 1873 he received a medal of merit at the Vienna Exposition for his work Sul compimento delle opere di bonifica della Maremma Toscana. Sent to Parliament in 1870, by the first college of Ravenna, he became Secretary General of Public Works under Signor Zanardelli. In April, 1878, he entered the first Carotoli Cabinet as Minister of Public Works. The same name is repeated in the list of Ministers. It will be remembered that he was on his order of the day the third Depretis Administration fell. Bernardino Grimaldi, the new Minister of Finance, commenced his parliamentary career in 1870, at the same time with Signor Depretis, and he is in the list of Ministers of Finance. In 1877, a brilliant conjunction Signor Carotoli has tion, is a man of distinguished literary attainments, the author of several works of merit, among which are La Sicilia, La Sicilia Antica, and La Sicilia Moderna. The oldest among the Signor Carroli's kindred, he was born at Palermo on the 19th March, 1812. From his youth, he has been concerned in the political vicissitudes of his country. In 1848 he was elected Deputy to the Sicilian Parliament, and in 1849 he was elected a member of the Bourbon restoration. For a short time he held the direction of the Livorno Railway Company, and afterwards became one of the Councillors of the Court of Accounts at Turin. In 1850 he returned to Sicily, having been elected by the Proprietors of the land, to the extraordinary Council of State, sitting in Palermo, to consider the reforms to be introduced into the internal regime of the island and since then has continued to take a leading part in the administration of the island. He was elected a member of the Council of Palermo and President of the Provincial Council—offices he will of course resign. In 1871 he was raised to the rank of Senator, and from 28th December, 1877 to 7th March, 1878, he held the portfolio of Public Instruction. He is a man of liberal opinions, and is said to be somewhat tinged with ideas of Sicilian Home Rule. Of Lieutenant General Cesare Bonelli, the new Minister of War, there is little to be said beyond what relates to the life and steady rise of a brave soldier and you are naturally reminded of the words of the poet of the Castle of Otranto which tell of the way he distinguished himself there as Colonel of Artillery, or of the splendid artillery due

Garibaldi had the ceremony been performed, and before the marriage was consummated, he would have been married to her. But Garibaldi received a letter conveying the dreadful announcement that his newly married wife had rendered herself unworthy of him two months before, and was in the way to become in due time a mother. Garibaldi laid the letter before her. She confessed that she had handed down to him a child, and in some months afterwards she gave birth to a son. Some time after Garibaldi had retired to Capreae, he formed a connection with the Signora Francosa, since when they have lived as man and wife. The child was a girl, named Manlio and Clotia. With this desire, it is understood, of legitimatising these children and legally marrying their mother, Garibaldi now seeks for a decree of nullity as regards his marriage with the Raimondi. I must here observe that at the time when this marriage was contracted, the Civil Code of Austria was in force, and it is according to the Austrian law there in force, that the case must be decided. According to that law Garibaldi has a full right to have the marriage declared null, because of the condition in which he was bound to enter into it. He was bound to be a virgin, and never having in consequence cohabited with her, but inasmuch as it has been ascertained that there were informalities committed, or rather formalities neglected, at the time of the marriage, which the Austrian law regards as irregularly declared, the consent of parents and guardians, the want to render the marriage null, Garibaldi has brought forward this plea only—and this from a laudable feeling

Sole Wholesale Agents, M. Nos. and Co., Wynward-lane, Sydney.

It is a question which occurs at some period of life to almost all of us, and it is a question which involves two important considerations, viz., QUALITY and PRICE. ECONOMY is a virtue which should be cultivated by everybody, and in thinking about where shall I go to get the BEST and CHEAPEST, I am reminded of the place where we can find the best exercise for our ECONOMICAL NOTIONS. With this serious object in view, it is only natural that the Advertiser should suggest the PREMIER FURNISHING WAREHOUSE of the colony, THE ROYAL FURNISHING WAREHOUSE, 100, QUEEN STREET, SYDNEY. All kinds and classes of HOUSEHOLD GOODS arranged along the various avenues, all marked at the LOWEST PROMPT SALE

IF the superiority of any Sewing Machine is to be judged from the extent of its sales, the premier position is taken up by the GENUINE HOMER SHUTTLE. If you intend to purchase a good and reliable Machine, you are requested to call at the SOLE RETAIL AGENCY and examine for yourself. Every Machine is guaranteed to be in perfect working order. Time for payment is deposited, 25¢ each weekly. Liberal terms for cash and to dealers.
